TWO GIRLS, CUT OFF BY WAR IN FRANCE, REACH HOME SAFELY

Isolated in Breton Village, They Are Held Eighteen Days, Then Make Their Way to Paris.

To be stranded in a seaport town eight hours from Paris, and cut off from communication with the outside world for eighteen days during the mobilization of the French army, was the experience of two Philadelphia girls, Miss Hortense Levy, 1424 North Fifteenth street, and Miss Helen Abrahams, 3119 Diamond street, who returned to this city yesterday after a series of exciting experiences within the war zone. They were at a small seaport town named St. Jean du Doigt, in Brit-

"We were no worse off than the rest of the women of Europe and a great deal more fortunate than the majority," said Miss Levy yesterday in speaking of her experiences. "Everywhere the men have deserted the villages and the women are taking over their labors.

"On August 1 I was attracted to the window of my room by the pitiful crying at a funeral which was being held in a picturesque cemetery across the street. It was while in the midst of this dismai scene that the tones of the tocsin bell oroke in, telling that war had been declared. The proclamation calling for mobilization, which was pasted before the mayor's office, was several yards long. It was received at 5 o'clock Sunday evening and at the 6 o'clock church services the next morning no men were present, all were in the fields hastily harvesting their crops or were on their way to the front. "During the period of mobilization we were not allowed to leave the town. We were with little money and were cut off from news and friends in the outside

FRENCH WERE COURTEOUS. "The French were very courteous to us. Prices were not raised. In fact, the prices on butter and eggs came down. Butter could be bought for 10 cents a pound, because the usual sources of its outlet were cut off. Notices were posted notifying the public that it was a penal offense to raise prices.

"While we were stranded we knew but little of what was going on on the outside. The men had all left, and all the activity of the town was carried on by the women. We spent considerable of our time sawing for the Red Cross.

"On August 18 we were able to reach Paris, after many passports and papers had been signed. The trip took 25 hours, while it usually takes but eight. On the trip to Paris we stopped at La Mons, where the first trainloads of wounded were being brought in.

"At Amiens we saw the arrival of the 55,000 English troops. They displayed the greatest good humor and were singing a popular song, 'Tipperary' which the na-tives believed to be their national air. The postage stamps of France, which formerly cost two cents, are now selling for three, the extra cent being used for the Red Cross relief work.

"Everywhere we found the wildest excitement. The soldiers go on their way singing, the women hang flowers from

They had to work their own way from the coast of Brittany to Parls, but in the French capital they met friends, who assisted them to reach Lon-

Hartman Kuhn arrived yes-terday evening and are registered for a few days at the Evil few days at the Bellevue-Stratford. The other couple were Mr. and Mrs. Morris Dannenbaum, of 1901 Spring Garden

WAR NEWS IN LETTER. An interesting account of the war conditions in Antwerp and the attack of the German Zeppelins on the city is contained in a letter received by Max Hess, of 2035 Arch street, from his brother Philippe, who has been attending school in that city.

"Schools, theatres and cafes have been closed," the letter says, "and have been turned into hospitals. Automobiles and motorcycles bear the insignia of the army. Soldiers patrol the streets and all starting for the front are loaded with flowers, cigars, candy and luxuries. The English allies receive ovations whenever they appear on the streets."

The attack of the Zeppelins occurred at I o'clock at night, according to the letter. "We all had retired," he writes, "and the people had heard no rumors of an enemy for some time, when suddenly the city was shaken as if by an earthquake. A series of explosions followed at short intervals and people rushed into the streets, not knowing where the next bomb would fail.

"The King, who had moved with his family to Antwerp, is said to have rushed Into the street coatless and hatlens. Ten bombs were dropped and eight people were killed and is wounded. The whirr of were killed and 28 wounded. The whirr of the propellers of the destroyers could be heard all the time that the bombs were being dropped, and the only evidence the people had of the presence of an enemy close at hand was the low droning hum of the propeller blades, which preceded the dropping of a bomb, after which the pilot sent the machine beyond the range of any possible attack.

"All business must be suspended at 8 clock and all lights must be covered at hight now to prevent future attacks by the air destroyers. Dark coverings are got now to prevent future attacks are at destroyers. Dark coverings are at over the lights and soldiers patrol the treets in groups to ward off any attack. The letter, which had large portions of it at out by the censor, also had a map of he destroyed buildings taken from it before helps payed.

England is described as war mad by Edward V. Kane, who returned with his daugater, Miss Miriam Clark Kane, on the Campania late Saturday evening Mr. Sane and his daughter have been traveling threugh England and Scotland and visited Glasgow. Edinburgh and Lendore during the mobilization of the army. Everywhere we found the greatest enthusiasm," said Mr. Kane, "and all quasilons of internal dispute seemed to have been forzoiten. Every one acted as a unit in declaring for the war and its lustice." Mr. Kane said that the Cambania made the trip with twice her usual number of passengers, and that large numbers of Americans still are in England awaiting transportation. All port heles were covered on the trip and the voyage was made by the expresse porther. England is described as war mad by EdHONGE CONGRESSMAN LOGUE

WIDESPREAD UNREST THROUGHOUT ITALY

Frequency of Disorders at Home Causes Alarm—Consequences of War Heavy on Budget.

A strong light is thrown upon the precent condition of affairs in Italy, and upon the decision of the Italian Government to maintain neutrality, in a letter to the New York Evening Post from its Naples correspondent, of which the following is part:

Cerignola is a little city in Apulia, in the south of Italy, between the Appenines and the Adriatic. Yesterday, as certain orators of the Liberal party were speaking in the public square, a bomb burst under the platform of the orators. The news of the event is not orators. The news of the event is not as yet precise, but it appears that a poor young man was killed, it is hardly known how. We read already that Cerignola is a "nest of anarchists"; the intervention of the Government is already invoked for making arrests in mass. or, if necessary, setting up some new kind of gallows in the public square.

In large proportions the same thing occurred in the tumults of Romagna and during the days of the general strike and of the threatened rail-way strike a month ago.

I was not in Italy when there took place, on the 7th of last June, the dis-orders of Ancona, which have been discussed largely by the national and intermational press. After a private political meeting, about 200 persons, Socialists and Republicans together, in small groups, directed themselves toward one of the city squares, the Plazza Roma. A cordon of police had been already placed to bar the way to the crowd. A conflict ensued between the crowd and the police. The policemen say they were by stones and by a few shots fired, which last they have not been able to prove; the demonstrators deny it. It is easy to believe that the carabineers were maltreated by the crowd, just as it is also believable that nothing terrible would have happened if 200 or more persons had been allowed to walk about freely in Piazza Roma, in Ancona, and to shout

a few hurrahs and the reverse. * * *
I came back to Italy from a long journey in Greece, and first to Rome, where the general strike had already begun, and the most varied and sensational events were in progress. The Conservative and Liberal papers were full of catastrophic accounts; they spoke openly of anti-monarchical plots and of organized revolution. Thus a great panic spread through all Italy.

Italy can be ruled only by either a yrannical Government, like that of the opes or of the medieval nobles, or by a strong and laborious demoracy, con-sclous that faith in ideas and in the men their windows and even the wounded do not lose their good humor." ganization of the administration and of this crisis of growth and this initial distrust in a form of government insufficiently active and operative according to what most people believe to be the material and spiritual necessities of Italian life, have had their share in the recent disorders.

They here continued to consider and to treat the peasant as they did 50 years ago; they have dominated the local administrations, and have had the Govern-ment at their service; law and justice have been almost entirely on their side. Thus, between proprietors and laborers there has risen a barrier over which is sometimes stretched the hand of a mad-man, armed by a criminal, to fire the fuse of a bomb.

The consequences of the war weigh and must continue to weigh heavily on our budget. Italy, having shown herself strong and great in the presence of the whole world, has created new difficulties for herself abroad, and this is another reason for not illuding ourselves about her internal conditions and for not foldher internal conditions and for not falsifying their origin and cause.

The Italian Government has chosen the direct road of neutrality in the ex-plosion of this homicidal madness of con-quest. It is not enough to say that the road chosen is the most loyal, by reason of the honest interpretation of the treaty which binds Italy to Germany and Ausbusiness is suspended. All the soldiers tria. It must be recognized that this is a duty toward the nation at this moment.

CONTRACTOR SUES CITY

Seeks to Recover Money Deducted for Pavement Repairs.

David Peoples, a contractor, sued the city in the Municipal Court today to recover $400, which he claims was improp-erly deducted from his bill. In September, 1912, the city awarded a contract to Peoples for the reconstruction of main sewers. Part of the work consisted of the building of a sewer in Chestnut street, from 42d to 43d street.

While the work was progressing on the south side of the street, the United Gas Improvement Company, Peoples says, tore up the sidewalk on that side to get at its gas mains. The city repayed the sidewalk and charged the cost, $600, to Peoples. When the contractor was paid for his work this amount was deducted. The contractor declares that he had nothing to do with the tearing up of the ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 14.—The executive the George Junior Republic has voted to attempt to keep that institution open. It has been decided to recommend to the board of trustees that William R.
